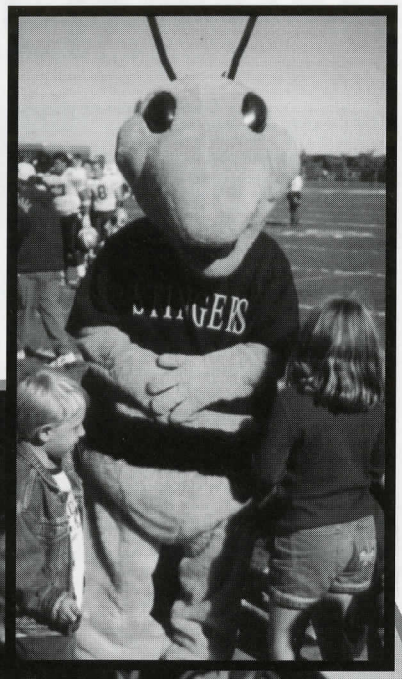
Buzz The Life of a Bee



Buzz, the Concordia mascot, has become a huge fan favorite since joining the Stingers in the summer of 1998.

And in a very short time, he's put together an impressive résumé. Of course, he's a fixture at most Stinger games, leading the cheering for the home team and doing his best to fluster visiting teams. But he's also made many other special appearances, including a trip to Toronto's SkyDome and the Vanier Cup in his rookie campaign. He's attended two CIAU Women's Ice Hockey Championships. He even braved a bus trip to Lennoxville, Que., to cheer the men's rugby team to victory in the 1999 Quebec championship game.

Some of his other appearances include visits to the Concordia Boys and Girls Hockey Skills Camps and he celebrates his birthday at Concordia Summer Sports Camp. He visits the children at the Shriners Hospital every September and is one of the guests of honor at Concordia's annual holiday skating party. He once attended a computer convention in Las Vegas, and this past November he starred in his first theatrical production. Between periods at a men's hockey game he battled Darth Vader, saving the day.

The life of a mascot can be very busy and challenging, but when the game's on the line you can count on Buzz to bee there.

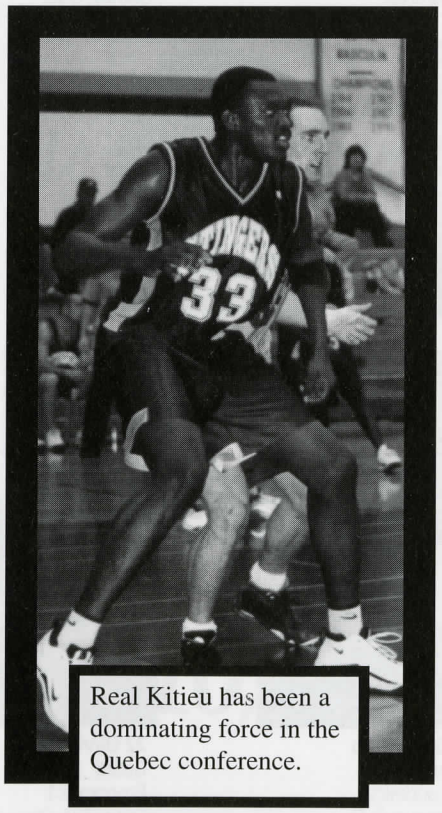
Heart and Soul

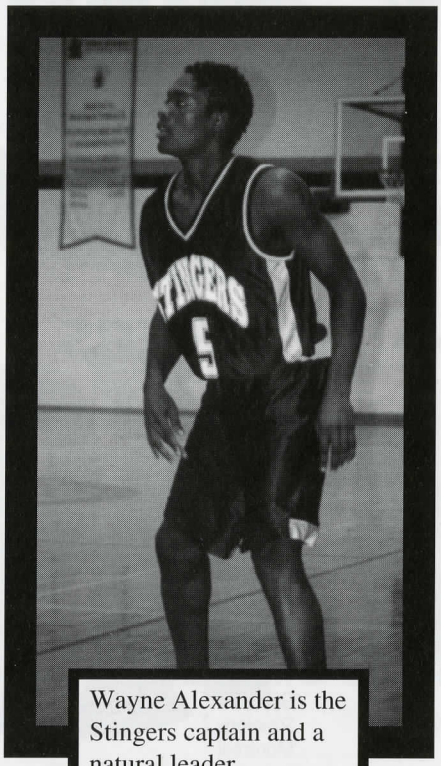
Kitieu, Alexander set the pace for young Stingers

Centre Real Kitieu and guard Wayne Alexander have the 2000-'01 Concordia Stingers men's basketball team off to one of its best starts in the history of the university.

"We should be competing for a conference championship if things come together as we hope," says head coach John Dore, who is in his 12th year at the helm of the Stingers. "There's no telling how far we can go. A national championship is not an unrealistic goal, but we have a lot of work to do to get to that level.



Real Kitieu has been a dominating force in the Quebec conference.



Wayne Alexander is the Stingers captain and a natural leader.

"Whatever we accomplish, it's Real and Wayne that are leading us. They are a huge part of our success."

This year the Stingers are very young, but strong leadership, ability and enthusiasm have the Stingers in first place in the Quebec conference at the holiday break.

"We are extremely athletic," Dore says. "We play a full-court game and we use our athleticism. Over the last few years we have been one of the top scoring teams in the country and we will continue to be. We're an exciting team to watch. We play the kind of basketball fans like to watch. A bunch of our guys this year can really play above the rim."

Concordia also had a strong showing in three preseason tournaments, winning the Laurentian Voyageurs competition at the end of October. Kitieu and Alexander were named to the all-star team at all three tournaments. Alexander was also the MVP at the Voyageurs tourney. He scored 32 points in the championship game.

Dore says Alexander, a third-year guard from Ottawa, is the heart and soul of the Stingers. He can play power forward, point guard and every position in between. He was the outstanding defensive player in the Quebec conference last year and the Stingers' team MVP.

"We depend on his leadership - on and off the court," says Dore. "It's a pleasure to work with him. He realizes you have to put in a lot of work to be successful - both as an individual and collectively."

At six-foot-nine, 245 pounds, Kitieu is a force to reckon with. He was a first team Quebec all-star last season. He has the ability to dominate opponents. It's not unusual for him to have 12 blocks in a game.

"Real was probably the leading shot blocker in the country last year," says Dore. "And this year we expect a lot more consistency from him at the offensive end of the court."

Kitieu is also in his third season. He is a native of Douala, Cameroon.

Maritime Influences

Eastern hockey talent helps Stingers stay on top

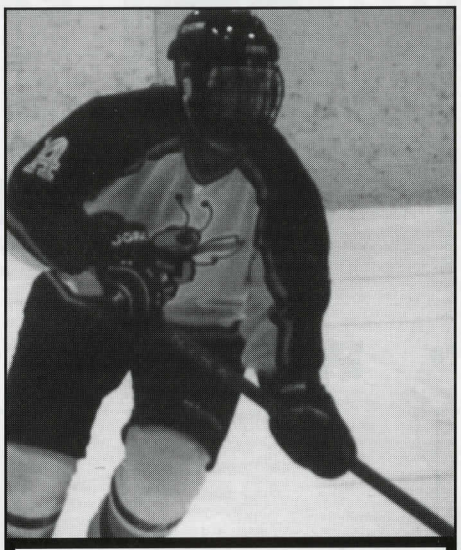
Les Lawton, head coach of the Concordia Stingers women's hockey team, has a secret weapon that helps him and his teams enjoy great success year after year. Over the last half dozen or so years, he's been tapping into a wealth of talent coming out of the Maritime provinces.

"There's a lot of raw talent in the East," says Lawton. "I see a lot of potential in the players. They're very coachable. They have a real good appreciation for women's hockey in general and our program here at Concordia University."

Concordia's strong relationship with Maritime hockey dates back to the early 1990s when Lesley and Lisa Jordan, sisters from Westville, N.S., joined the Stingers. They developed into great athletes, playing alongside U.S. Olympians Cammi Granato and Karyn Bye.

"The Jordans coming here, having success and going back to Nova Scotia where they're giving back to their communities and the game – I think that's been huge for us," says Lawton. "Lisa is coaching women's hockey at Saint Mary's University and Lesley is working with the provincial team."

Sue Kaye of Truro, N.S., is one of the more recent arrivals. Now in her third year and a Stinger assistant captain, she's happy she decided to play hockey at Concordia.



Sue Kaye, a defender from Truro, N.S., has enjoyed her experiences at Concordia and in the big city.

"I think the calibre of hockey is great," says Kaye, who has two university national championships under her belt. "We're on the ice everyday and then there's off-ice training. Also the calibre of the coaching is great. There's strong support for the program from the university. I've also enjoyed moving to the big city."

In recent years, Kaye has noted a distinct Concordia presence in her neck of the woods.

"Now every girl in Nova Scotia thinks about playing hockey at Concordia," she says. "My advice to them is to definitely come. It's a great experience."

Since joining the Stingers, Kaye and teammate Leanne Martell of Trenton, N.S., also enjoyed the attention of Canada's national team coaches. Both were named to the junior national team – Kaye in 1998 and Martell in 1999.

To find out more about playing women's hockey at Concordia University call head coach Les Lawton at (514) 848-3866.

Home Sweet Home

Basketball is fun again now that Kristina Steinfort is playing in Montreal

Kristina Steinfort, now in her 17th year of basketball, has always enjoyed her time on the court. From her games as a young girl in the Brookwood Basketball Association to the heady days of winning a national championship at John Abbott College, the game has always been fun.

But there was a three-year period – 1996-'99 – when Steinfort pursued her love of the game at Hartford University, a Division I school in Connecticut, and there was very little enjoyment.

"I enjoyed the experience school-wise and I met some great people, but I did not enjoy the basketball," says Steinfort, a six-foot-two post from Dollard des Ormeaux, Que.

Concordia head coach Keith Pruden remembers when Steinfort made the decision to head south of the border.

"I recruited her when she came out of CEGEP," he says. "Everyone in Quebec recruited her. Everyone was disappointed when she went to Hartford. She didn't play much in her first and second years down there, and from where I'm sitting that was just silly."

Steinfort transferred to Concordia in the fall of 1999 and the benefits have been great for both her and the Stingers.

Kristina Steinfort likes to shoot 3s.

"Now I'm back here and I'm having fun," Steinfort says. "The coach is great. I've improved my knowledge of my position. Coach allows me to shoot 3s, which I like. I was more restricted in the States. There, only guards shoot 3s. I also like my teammates and I think we're pretty close."

Pruden feels Steinfort never had a chance to develop her talents in Hartford. He's happy to have her at Concordia where he thinks she will get the chance to mature as a player.

"I think she can be an All-Canadian at the CIAU level," he says. "She posts up well on the block. She's a good rebounder and she can shoot the ball from outside. So she has the ability to shoot from all over the floor."

Half way through her first season in a Stinger uniform, Steinfort is averaging 11.3 points and five rebounds a game. It's a good start, but Pruden wants more.

"She's been a great help to us," he says. "Although she hasn't reached her potential yet. She's got to be a force out there on the court and she's got to score. The games we've won, she's been a major force. When she's not consistently scoring, we struggle. I know she can handle it. She's very serious about basketball and she wants the responsibility of being the go-to player."

CHILD'S Play

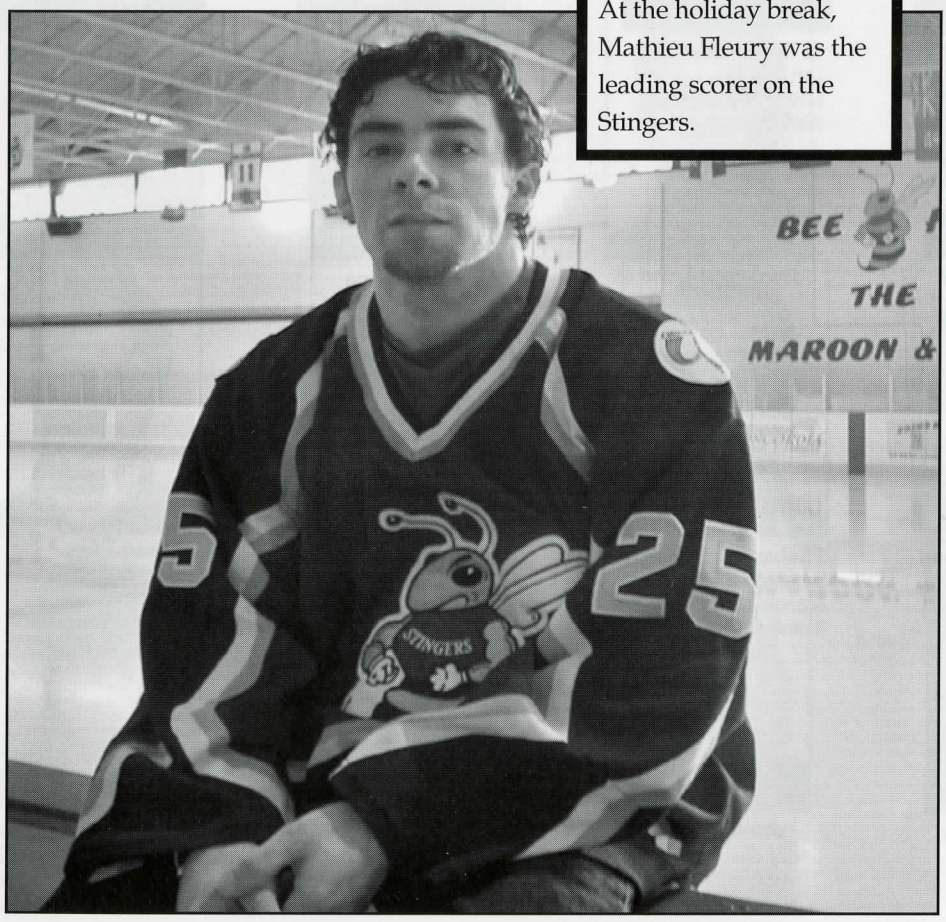
Youthful enthusiasm powers Mathieu Fleury's game

The 1999-2000 season saw Mathieu Fleury mature as a university hockey player, an academic and as a young man. But if you mention it to the 24-year-old native of Cap Rouge, Que., he'll just laugh and tell you he's "just a big kid."

Despite his gentle protests, Fleury came into his own in his second year at Concordia University. With the Stingers, he emerged as a leader and a scorer. The right wing notched 13 goals and 24 assists for 37 points in 34 games. His numbers were third best on the team. This year at the Christmas break, he was the Stingers' leading scorer with seven goals and 12 assists for 19 points in 16 games.

"I can't say enough about Mathieu," says Concordia head coach Kevin Figsby. "It's obvious that he's going to be a big part of our future. He's a key element in the foundation we're laying down. Even though he's only in his third season, we count on him heavily for leadership."

Fleury's confidence and personal growth are also apparent on his transcript. When he arrived at Concordia in the fall of 1998, he had no plans or ambitions. He did not declare a major and took a variety of classes, searching for a direction. When he returned in the fall of 1999, he enrolled in the Leisure Sciences program and began to focus on a career working with children. His grades went over the 3.0 mark.



At the holiday break, Mathieu Fleury was the leading scorer on the Stingers.

When he speaks of his goals, a big smile cracks his face. "Every time I play or work with kids, I know this is what I want to do. They have this great energy that energizes everyone around them. They are always happy. I can't think of a career that could be more rewarding."

Fleury says his father Gratien, who has a degree in criminology from the University of Ottawa and is a probation officer in Longueuil, Que., has been a big influence on him and the path he's chosen.

"I've learned a lot from him," Mathieu says. "He works with people who have problems with the justice system and he's the most devoted person I know. I wanted to follow in his footsteps at first, but now I know my heart is set on working with children."

Since the 2000-'01 season began, he's been helping out at the Concordia Boys and Girls Hockey Skills Camp every Wednesday night. Last summer, Fleury worked six weeks at a hockey school run by former Stinger teammates Patrick Groleau and Alexandre Charette.

Men's Hockey Homecoming

Stingers, alumni gather to honor Maurice Richard

Jean Béliveau, the former Montreal Canadiens great, joined the Concordia Stingers men's and women's hockey teams and the Friends of Concordia Hockey Alumni at a special ceremony to retire Maurice Richard's No. 9 on Friday, Nov. 10.

Three sweaters - all with the famous No. 9 - were hoisted to the ceiling; a Canadiens jersey, and two Concordia sweaters, representing both the men's and women's teams.

Like most Quebecers, members of the Concordia Stingers family were deeply saddened by the death of Maurice Richard in May. Richard transcended the game in a way no other hockey player has. His influence and presence were especially prevalent in the province of Quebec. And like many other Quebec organizations, the Stingers felt it was important to pay respect to their hero.

Following the ceremony, the men's team defeated the McGill Redmen 6-4 before an enthusiastic crowd of 600 fans.

The ceremony was one of many activities on the men's hockey alumni weekend. There was also a cocktail, a dinner, an alumni game and a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Montreal Shamrocks Stanley Cup victory.

To find out more about men's hockey alumni activities call Concordia head coach Kevin Figsby at (514) 848-3856.

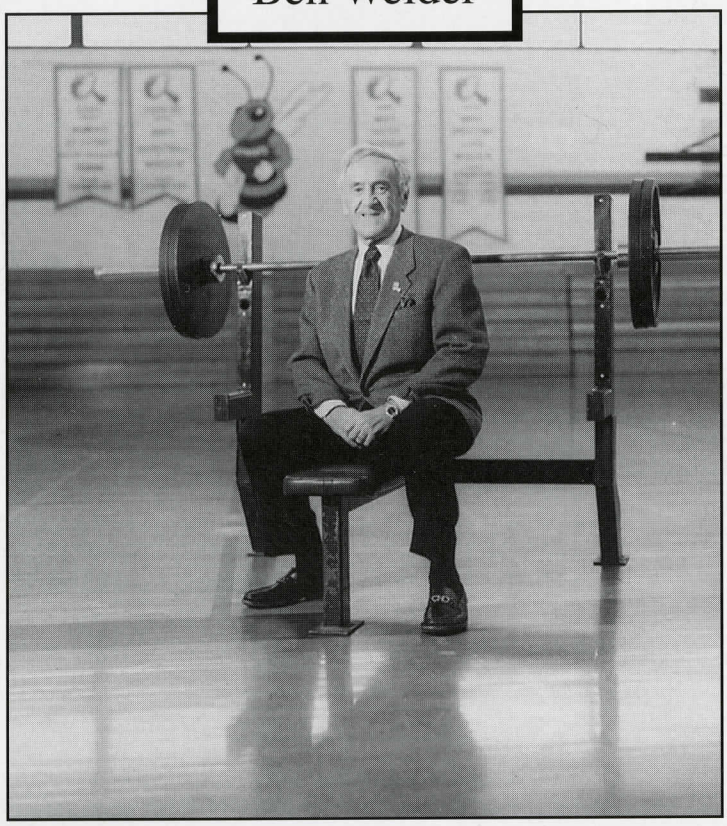
The Campaign to build and renovate Concordia's recreation & athletic facilities

A generous donor has already committed $1 million to the project

Ben Weider



Concordia University has limited offerings when it comes to exercise and physical fitness, but that's about to change. In the near future there will be plenty of space for everyone – students, staff, alumni and neighbors – to work at staying fit and healthy.

Planning is under way for expanded and renovated recreation and athletic facilities on the Loyola campus and for a new fitness centre on the Sir George Williams campus, located on the corner of Guy St. and de Maisonneuve Blvd.

On the Loyola campus, the goal is to quadruple the opportunities for recreation and fitness. The plan includes turning the existing gymnasium into a fitness centre with a full component of cardio and weight training equipment. A new double gymnasium, a swimming pool, new locker rooms and a sports medicine centre are also in the plans.

"Renovating and expanding is a priority for us," says Harry Zarins, Concordia's director of recreation and athletics. "To make this dream come true we need a significant amount of money. We're hoping that former athletes and people who recognize the importance of physical fitness will provide the support we need to make our plan a reality."

There's a lot involved in pulling together a project of this magnitude. A key component will be teamwork. The team spirit has already been ignited by one very generous donor – Ben Weider, who is donating fitness equipment for both the Loyola and downtown facilities. His gift is worth in excess of $1 million.

Other key players on the fundraising team are the Concordia students. A portion of student fees paid at registration have been designated for the recreation and athletics project. At the end of a 10-year period, Concordia students will have contributed approximately $4 million to the new and renovated facilities.

To find out more about contributing to the facilities campaign, contact Belinda Pyle at the university advancement office (514) 848-3887 or director of recreation and athletics, Harry Zarins, at (514) 848-3867.

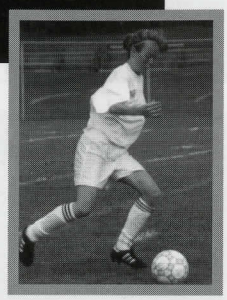
FALL Review



The championship men's rugby team has its eye on bigger things

The Concordia Stingers won their second straight Quebec men's rugby championship.

The Concordia Stingers men's rugby team enjoyed another championship season, posting an impressive 8-2 win-loss record, winning a second consecutive Quebec university crown and defeating two New Brunswick teams in the post-season.

Under the direction of rookie head coach Gerry Clayton, the Stingers won four games and lost just two in the regular season. In the Quebec playoffs, Concordia defeated the McGill Redmen 15-11 in the semifinal and beat the Bishop's Gaiters 19-16 to win the provincial championship. Matt Garston's convert and three penalty kicks led the way.

Not content to sit on their Quebec crown, Clayton and team manager Clive Gibson sought out championship competition in Atlantic Canada. The Stingers travelled to Fredericton to take on the University of New Brunswick Varsity Reds and the St. Thomas Tommies.

Concordia defeated UNB, the 1999 Atlantic champions, by a score of 33-26. Scrumhalf Jason Low was named man of the match for his two tries and his efforts to keep the team moving forward. The following day the Stingers beat St. Thomas 25-24. The Tommies won the 2000 New Brunswick title. Second row Rob Imrie was named man of the match for his physical play in the scrums.

Concordia hopes the strong exhibition series will help lay the foundation for a 2001 Eastern Canadian championship, featuring the Ontario, Atlantic and Quebec champions. The Stingers are considering taking a lead role in organizing the tournament.

The women's rugby team also had a strong season, winning seven of 10 games. The Stingers posted a 6-2 record in the regular season. In the playoffs, they defeated the Ottawa Gee-Gees 25-0 in the semifinal before losing a close battle for the Quebec championship 15-10 against the McGill Martlets. Concordia's Sheila Turner was named Quebec Coach of the Year, while flanker Candace Patterson earned All-Canadian honors.

The women's soccer team continued its climb to respectability with a strong 5-7-1 record. Under the guidance of rookie head coach Ammar Awad, Concordia secured a playoff spot and stretched the undefeated McGill Martlets to the limit in the semifinal, losing 1-0. Mid-fielder Jo-Anne Belair and defender Kathleen Grzybowski were named to the QSSF second all-star team.

The Stingers' men's soccer team enjoyed a .500 regular season with a 3-3-4 record. Then lost a tough semifinal game 4-2 to the UQAM Citadins. Xavier Renard, Concordia's scoring leader with five goals in 10 games, was named a second team CIAU All-Canadian.

In a transitional season, the football team struggled to a 2-6 record but had a number of individual honors. Guard Steve Jobin was a first team All-Canadian, while defensive back Loan Duong was a second team All-Canadian. Running back Anthony Brown made Concordia history by becoming the first ever Stinger to be nominated for the Russ Jackson Award which is presented annually to the player best exemplifying academic achievement, football skill and citizenship.
